I have tried to remove it and reset it numerous times with no luck. If I restore my iphone back to factory settings then itunes recognizes that it is connected to my iphone and is charging it but the screen is black. I am able to view files on it but will not put anything on it. I do not have any backups of my iphone because I do not trust a 3rd party with something that I could not afford to lose. Is there any way to completely get rid of the trojan? A: Your problem is: your iPhone has been infected with a malware called a Trojan horse, which downloads malware when you open an attachment. It uses a stealth technique to convince you that the attachment is legit, for example, it comes in a Zip file and a text file, or it is supposedly sent by a non-malicious person. The end result is that you download a malware attachment, which installs a Trojan, without ever realizing that it is an attachment that is downloaded. The "text file" can be anything, like a video file or a picture. Without knowing what exact Trojan you downloaded, there is no way to remove or recover your phone, but there are tools that can detect the presence of a Trojan horse. You can try some. I don't know what to suggest, however, since, without knowing what the Trojan was, there is no way to tell which one is the reason why your phone is infected. The ones that were mentioned on the comments, as far as I understand, are: F-Secure Antivirus. This will provide you some protection, and will detect the Trojan. There are similar programs that work the same way. The PhoneWalker trojan detector. It has instructions here on how
